DPD as controller

According to the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR), DPD (Netherlands) B.V. is the controller in all business processes. This means that we determine which personal data we process, how we process personal data and what the storage period is. We also determine who has access to the personal data.

Purpose of the processing

DPD has agreed with the principal that DPD will forward the parcels to the consignee. In order to do this, we need the personal data of the consignee. We also use personal data to provide additional services and to improve our service. In addition, we use personal data for direct marketing.

Personal data

We receive the personal data of the principal. DPD processes name and address details, telephone number, e-mail address and a signature or initials for receipt of the parcel. We also keep a cash on delivery administration.

The storage of personal data

We store the data on secure servers within the DPDGroup. It is also possible that we store the data with third parties.

Providing personal data

We use the personal data we receive only for the purpose for which we received them. We only pass on personal data to third parties if we are required to do so by contract or have received permission. Or if we are legally obliged to do so. In order to provide our services, we pass on personal data to our partners within the DPDGroup, to carriers and ICT companies. We process the data within the European Economic Area (EER), unless delivery of a parcel at the request of the principal must take place outside of the EER.

Security

DPD always takes appropriate technical and organizational measures to ensure the security level. We adjust this level to the risk. And we take into account technological developments, implementation costs, processing goals and the probability and impact of an infringement. In addition, every employee within DPD signs a confidentiality agreement so that the privacy of the personal data is guaranteed. This also applies to hired third parties, such as a transport company or an IT company.

Storage period

We store the personal data needed to deliver the parcels no later than two years. After this period we extract the personal data from the process. Are there legal obligations, which means we have to keep the data longer? Or do we need the data longer because a claim has been submitted? Then we deviate from the two-year term.
